The name is a reference to the Flemish baroque painter Adam-Frans van der Meulen (other painters in the same eigele, Rubens and Brueghel, are also mentioned so I think this is a stheme for this chapter).

Rude cheese-eating surrender monkeys

A degratory term for the Eresch, the surrender element of the phrase refers to the stereotype that the French are quick to surrender in milliary confrontations which gained popularity in the wake of the second World War.

The "Cheese eating" element relates to the well known cheese production and eating in France.
